

I used to only chase the sunshine,

always afraid of the clouds.

Over time,
I learned to call for the clouds
when they fill with grey,
heavy with doubts and tears;

I listen to their troubles till they cry.

Now I love to hear the clouds sing;
their sorrows
and sadness
fill up the streets.